Kari is an experienced coach and leadership consultant, having spent all of her 20 years of professional experience in human capital development. Well known for her passion, drive, honesty and sense of humour. Kari's career began in financial services at American Express Financial Advisors (now Ameriprise) where she won the American Express Chairman's Award for Quality for her innovative approach to mutual fund training.

Kari spent seven years in the professional services industry. As the Director of Professional Education and Leadership Development at Diamond Management and Technology Consultants, Kari was responsible for the firm's professional and leadership development, including Partner development. When PwC acquired Diamond, Kari led some of the firm's key development initiatives including a leadership programme she developed which won Training Magazine's 2014 Top Hall of Fame Outstanding Training Initiative. Kari also coached Directors and Partners globally for PwC.

Kari and her family relocated to the UK in 2014 and since then she has been living the life of her dreams coaching emerging and senior leaders in the US, UK, and Europe for organisations such as Exxon-Mobile, University of North Carolina, PwC UK, and PwC Cyprus. She also has a private practice where she works one-on-one with entrepreneurs, mothers returning to work, and clients in career transition. Her clients consistently praise her for her "all-in" approach, her ability to ask the right questions and being able to work really hard together while still having a blast.

Kari is a Certified Professional Co-Active Coach with The Coaches Training Institute and an active member of the International Coach Federation. She believes in discovering and living a life that aligns with your values and purpose every day. Her personal marching orders are to do work she loves with people she loves to work with. She is a Norwegian-American from Minnesota in the US and frequently laughs that she's somehow ended up living in a quaint English movie set that is actually real.
